Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to apply for the position advertised by your organization. I hold a Computer Engineering BSc and have worked in product teams, client projects and public library service, which has given me a mix of technical understanding, organization and everyday contact with people.

At Example Apps Ltd. I take part in release planning, collect and sort user feedback and make sure that decisions are documented for the whole team. In client projects at Sample Studio Ltd. I prepared estimates and regular status reports, so I am used to clear written communication and deadlines. As a library assistant during my studies I served visitors, maintained the catalogue and organized events for families and students.

For several years I have also been a volunteer mentor at a code club for children, where I plan monthly workshops and present in front of groups. I am patient, reliable and organized, and I enjoy making processes clearer for the people who rely on them.

What attracts me to your organization is the chance to work closely with people and to see the direct effect of well-organized work. I learn new systems quickly, I am comfortable with spreadsheets and documentation, and I like to turn scattered information into simple checklists and guides that others can follow without asking. I am also used to switching between technical and non-technical colleagues and finding a common language.

I would be glad to contribute this experience to your team. Thank you for your time and consideration; I look forward to hearing from you.
